INTRODUCTION.

IT has often been remarked that at the time of the Reformation in Scotland no attempt was made to provide the people with the Scriptures in their own vernacular. The Bible was imported from England, and its language, which at first cannot have been easily understood by the masses, came by degrees to exercise a marked influence in anglicising the native speech. A few years ago no fragments of any portion of the Bible in Scots were known to exist, if we exclude the occasional quotations made by a few writers, and these chiefly Roman Catholics, who, repudiating the English versions, made their own translations as required from the Latin Vulgate. John Gau in his 'The Richt Vay to the Kingdome of Heuine,' printed at Malmö in Sweden in 1533, is almost the solitary instance of a Scottish Protestant citing Scripture in his native dialect, and his book is a translation of the Danish work of Christiern Pedersen, 'Den rette vey till Hiemmerigis Rige,' originally published at Antwerp in 1531.¹ Gau therefore naturally translated the Scriptural passages into Scots from the book before him.¹ The Biblical citations in the Catechism of 1552, which goes by the name of Archbishop Hamilton, are numerous, and a comparison of these with others of the kind contained in Roman Catholic writings of the latter half of the sixteenth century may possess some interest. It was, indeed, at one time the intention of the Scottish Text Society to gather together all such citations for a partial reconstruction of a Scottish Bible, or rather as some specimens of what such a Bible might have been.²

The announcement made eight years ago that a manuscript of the New Testament, with sundry lessons from the Old Testament, in Scots, was among the Auchinleck MSS. which were for sale, came then with the surprise of a new and welcome discovery. This truly unique volume, after passing through the hands of Mr Quaritch, was acquired by Lord Amherst of Hackney, who at once generously placed it at the service of the Scottish Text Society for publication.

The manuscript in the main tells its own history. On a blank page, f. 231 v., at the end of the section of the book which was first finished, are several signatures and memoranda of ownership, thus:—

¹ Principal Rollock at a later date seems to have made to some extent his own translation from the Greek in his 'Certaine Sermons vpon severall places of the Epistles of Pavl.' Edinb. 1599—reprinted by the Wodrow Society, 1849; but the Scottish colouring of his language is comparatively slight.

At the beginning of the volume, as now bound, there is inserted a letter from James, Sergeant Nisbet, to Lady Betty Boswell of Auchinleck, dated May 31, 1725; and at the end of the volume is inserted a copy of 'A True Relation of the Life and Sufferings of John Nisbet in Hardhill. His Last Testimony to the Truth, with a short Account of his last Words on the Scaffold, December 4th, 1685. The Second Edition Corrected and Amended. Edinburgh, Printed by Robert Brown in Forrester's Wynd, 1719.' This quarto tract of twenty-four pages is followed by the copy for the printers of the first edition, with title, 'A trew relation of the Life and Sufferings of John Nisbet in Hardhill. His last testimony to the truth, with a short account of his last words on the Scaffold, Dec^r. 4, 1685. Never hitherto published.' On folio 2 r. is a cancelled title, 'A short but true account of the family of Nisbets who lived in Hardhill in the parish of Lowden & Shire of Air, &c., &c. Never hitherto published.' This is dated 1718. F. 2 v. has an address to the Christian Reader signed Caleb Carrell, which states that 'His son James was bent for keeping this manuscript dormant for his own and his nephew's private excitation to follow the noble cloud of witnesses. But we have overpersuaded him and won this Jewell that it may benefite others.' This was written by the same Sergeant Nisbet, and was first published in 1718; and it is from this memoir¹ that we learn all that is to be learnt of the family traditions regarding the origin and history of the manuscript.

The story shall be told, with some abridgment, in the Sergeant's own words:—

✓ 'In the reign of King James the IV., some time before the year 1500, it pleased the eternal Jehovah . . . to cause his marvellous light take influence on Mordoch Nisbet in Hardhill, in the parish of Loudon and shire of Ayr. . . . His eyes were opened to see the vanity and evil of Popery, . . . so he deliberately resolved against it, turned from it, and joined himself with these called Lollards, the first name given to British Protestants, whom Papists called Hereticks. But in the reign of King James the V., the Papists, perceiving the Lollards began to grow numerous, and they not willing any should disturb their kingdom of darkness, raised persecution against them. Then Mordoch fled over seas, and took a copy of the New Testament in writ. What else he did we cannot say; but after some stay abroad

he came home to see his native country, with others who had been elsewhere upon the same occasion, two of whom were taken and burnt at Glasgow, viz., Mr Russell and Mr Kennedy, as is to be seen in the first book of Knox's History. Mordoch being in the same danger, digged and built a vault at the bottom of his own house, to which he retired himself, serving God and reading his new book. Thus he continued, instructing some few that had access to him, until the death of King James the V. But when the Queen Dowager held the regency, the true religion began to be more openly professed, the monuments and ornaments of Satan's kingdom of darkness pulled down. Mordoch, though then an old man, crept out of his vault, and joining himself with others of the Lord's people, lent his helping hand to this work through many places of the land, demolishing idolatry wherever they came. But having served his generation he died, and left his son Alexander Nisbet heir to his New Testament zeal and concern for the true religion, which he indeed took care of; and continuing therein to his life's end, left his son, James Nisbet, heir to the written New Testament, and other relatives. This James was humble, meek, and very religious, but nothing of a public spirit. He married one Janet Gibson. . . . She died young, and left him with two children, a son called John and a daughter called Mary. . . . James lived a widow all the rest of his days. . . . When he died he left the written New Testament to his son John, who was adorned with the humane advantages of a tall, strong, well-built body, and of a bold, daring, public spirit. He went abroad and joined in the military, the knowledge of which was of great use to him in time of the after-persecution. Having spent some years thus in foreign countries, he returned to Scotland and swore the covenants when King Charles at his coronation swore them in Scoon, 1650.'

John married Margaret Law and had four children. He took up arms for the covenant, was severely wounded at Pentland, 'did good service' at Drumclog and Bothwell, and was finally captured and executed at Edinburgh. The treasured New Testament descended to his son and biographer, Sergeant James Nisbet, who died in 1728.

Wodrow in his 'Analecta,' under the year 1728 (vol. iii. p. 518), continues the history of the family and the book:—

'James Nisbit, son to John Nisbit of Hardhill, Ensing or Lieutennant in the Castle of Edinburgh, dyed some moneths ago. He was a very eminent and singular Christian. . . . A litle before his death, he gote my Lord Grange's acquaintance, and he somtimes visited him in the Castle. He said to my Lord, he was the last of his old family, (and had no children), and had a nepheu bound to be a barber, to whom he was to leave his papers, and an old Wickliffe's Neu Testament, which had been in the family of Hardhill since the Reformation, and his Diary.¹ That his papers about civil affairs wer in some disorder, and he had nobody he could trust those to till his nepheu greu up but his Lordship, and begged he would take the trouble of them.'

Lord Grange made some difficulty about undertaking

this responsibility, and meanwhile 'It pleased the Lord, as a great mercy to James Nisbit, to incline his nepheu to a liking to what is good and serious. . . . A feu dayes before his death he sent to my Lord, and told nou he was a dying, and he had gote his papers and rights in some order, and could nou trust his nepheu . . . with them and the family Wickliffe's Testament.'

Mr Quaritch (Catalogue of Manuscripts, Dec. 1893) gives the further information that James's widow left the volume with Sir Alexander Boswell in trust for the young man, who was not to receive it unless he should prove himself worthy of it. It was, however, presently handed over to him, and he sold it to Gavin Hamilton, in whose bookshop Boswell discovered it in 1745. He at once recovered the volume by purchase, and it remained at Auchinleck until the early part of 1893.

It will be remarked that the family tradition nowhere describes Nisbet's 'new book' as in any way distinctively Scottish. Dr M'Crie (in his 'Life of Melville,' vol. ii. p. 404), referring to the 'True Relation,' seemed to have no suspicion that the MS. was anything more than an ordinary copy of Wycliffe's version. But it is manifestly the work of a Scottish scribe, who, taking Purvey's revision of Wycliffe as a basis, altered the grammar and vocabulary wherever necessary to make his transcript intelligible or easily readable to his own countrymen, and that scribe is clearly no other than Murdoch Nisbet himself. Unfortunately very little is known of the Lollard movement in Scotland. In 1494 a raid was made upon the Lollards of Kyle, in the neighbourhood of Nisbet's own home, when thirty persons, among whom were George

Campbell of Cesnock, John Campbell of New Mylnes, the wife of Mure of Polkellie, and other persons of position, were summoned before the King and Council by the Archbishop of Glasgow. It was about this time, or before 1500, that Murdoch Nisbet joined the sect; but, according to the 'True Relation,' it was not till after 1513, the accession of James V., that he fled 'over seas,' perhaps to England, and 'took,' that is, made, for himself 'a copy of the New Testament in writ' from some English book. The date of his return, 'after some stay,' is not specified. But we are told that subsequently two of his associates, Russell, who was a Franciscan friar, and Kennedy, a young man from Ayr, were taken and burnt at Glasgow. This was in 1539. From the Sergeant's narrative it would appear that now Murdoch, being in danger, constructed the vault at the bottom of his house, and there retired, 'serving God and reading his new book.'

The MS., apart from letters and printed matter now bound up with it, consists of 251 leaves, $10\frac{1}{4}$ inches by $7\frac{1}{4}$, bound in brown calf, lettered on the back 'Scottish New Testament. MS. about 1510.' Nine leaves are wanting. The collation, according to the water-marks, is as follows:—

- I. Introduction ('Prologe' and 'Summe'), Aa¹²; 12 leaves (1-12), wants leaves 1, 10, 12.
- II. Biblical text, A-T, nineteen quires in twelves; 228 leaves (13-240), wants leaf 37 in prologue to Mark, and leaves 236-240, which were probably blank.
- III. Appendix (Prologue to the Romans), aa¹² bb⁸; 20 leaves (241-260).

Internal evidence points to the years 1513-22 as the extreme limits of time within which the text (or section II.) was probably begun and finished. It is not likely, in any case, that after 1525, when copies of Tyndale's version were imported into Scotland, any Reformer would take a Wycliffite version from the Latin Vulgate, in preference to Tyndale's from the original Greek, as the basis of a Scots New Testament. But when Nisbet, after finishing his text, was thinking of a Prologue (section I.), Luther's version, first printed in 1522, was at hand—for the Scots prologue is in fact, for the greater part, a close translation of Luther's Preface; and this furnishes a further argument, of some probability at least, that even Luther's version was not published when the transcript of Purvey's text was begun, for the writer who could translate the Preface could as well have translated the text, and it may be presumed that he would have likewise preferred Luther to Purvey as a ground-work. It also appears that Tyndale had translated the same preface of Luther for the New Testament, the printing of which was interrupted in 1525.¹ If this had been known to the Scottish scribe, he would not have needed to make his own independent translation. Consequently we may put the composition of the Nisbet Preface between 1522 and 1526. At a later date, 1534 and 1536, appeared editions of Tyndale with the long prologue to the Epistle to the Romans. This came too late, apparently, for insertion in its proper place in the Nisbet MS., but a Scotticised transcript of it was added at some subsequent period at the end of the volume. Another trace of Tyndale's influence on our volume is perhaps to be found in the crosses and half-crosses which mark the beginning and end of certain lessons. These appear in Tyndale's editions of 1534 (Antwerp, M. Emperowr); 1536, 8vo; 1536 (Blankstone ed.), 4to; and 1536 (Mole ed.) In that of London, 1548-49 (Fry's No. 18), there is 'a Table to fynde the Epystles and Gospels vsuallye reade in the Churche, . . . whose begynnyng ye shall fynde in thys boke marked wyth a crosse ✚ and the ende wyth halfe a crosse ½.' The positions of the red crosses in Nisbet's MS. almost exactly correspond with those in Tyndale's editions, the few variations appearing to be the result of accident or oversight on the part of the rubricator who added them. But whatever may be the date of these prefaces and additions, the transcript of the text may be assigned with great probability to about 1520; and with this date agrees the character of the handwriting, in the opinion of critics competent to form a judgment upon the matter.

It is evident that the Amherst MS. is the holograph of the original scribe. Nisbet had before his eyes a copy of Purvey's revision, and we catch him at times inadvertently writing down an English word which a moment afterwards he corrects or erases. Thus in Mt. viii. 12 he copies from Purvey rewme, but before going further, recollecting himself, he underpoints the word as an error and adds realme. In Mt. vi. 2 he began to write trumpe, as it is in Purvey, but after writing the three letters tru, he marks them for erasure and substitutes 'blaw trumpet.' In Mt. i. he five times, with apparent inadvertence, copies down begat in the place of generit.

On the other hand, there is no sign of Nisbet's work ever having been copied. Before it was completed or furnished with its prologue, Tyndale's Testament had seen the light, the reform had entered upon a new phase, and the old man's version was no longer in demand. The Amherst MS. thus survives as a unique Biblical monument of the Scottish Lollards.

An examination of the linguistic character and peculiarities of this Scottish Testament may be more fitly reserved for the third volume, when the whole text will be before the reader. But something may be said here of the general relations of Nisbet's work to the English Wycliffite versions which preceded it, and to the Latin Vulgate, which lies at the basis of them all.

At the end of the fourteenth century there were two current versions of the Bible which emanated from Wycliffe or his followers. The first, which is ascribed to Wycliffe himself, though the greater part of the Old Testament was apparently the work of his companion, Nicholas of Hereford, was completed in or about 1382. It was a rough and very literal translation, closely adhering to the construction of the Latin original, while glosses or alternative renderings were occasionally introduced into the text. The need of a version in smoother and more flowing English was at once felt, and a new version, or rather a revision of the older version, was undertaken by another disciple of Wycliffe, John Purvey, whose work was executed about 1388, or four years after Wycliffe's death, which took place on December 31, 1384.

The two Wycliffite
Bibles.

There are extant numerous manuscripts of both of these Bibles, but for a long time their relationship was not clearly understood. An edition of the New Testament according to the second version was published in 1731 by Lewis, another in 1810 by Baber, and again another in 1841 by Bagster in his English Hexapla, the version in each case being taken for the earlier of the two and attributed to Wycliffe. The earlier version was first published in 1848 by Pickering. But in 1850 there issued from the Oxford University Press the magnificent work, in 4 vols. 4to, edited by the Rev. J. Forshall and Sir Frederic Madden, and entitled 'The Holy Bible, containing the Old and New Testaments, with the Apocryphal Books in the earliest English versions made by John Wycliffe and his followers.' In this work, the result of twenty-two years of labour, the editors printed the two versions in parallel columns, collected various readings from some 170 manuscripts, added a glossary, and in their preface established certain critical conclusions which have met with general acceptance.¹

In a prologue which Purvey prefixed to the Old Testament, he explains in detail the object and method of his translation. He tells us that he collected, in the first instance, a number of Bibles, in order to obtain a good text; in doubtful passages he consulted the Glossa [Ordinaria] and the commentary of Nicolas de Lyra, and took the advice of many grammarians and divines. He aimed at translating according to the sense of the passage rather than according to the literal meaning and sequence of the Latin words; and he explains the various ways in which the ablative absolute and other Latin constructions may be rendered in idiomatic English.

¹ Purvey's revision of the New Testament, with the glossary corresponding to it, was extracted from this edition by Prof. Skeat and reprinted with an excellent introduction, Oxford 1879.

The result is that although Purvey's version was based upon the earlier Bible, of which, indeed, it is a revision, the differences are so distinctly marked that it is impossible to mistake the one for the other. Purvey's version naturally became the more popular. More than a hundred years after its appearance a copy, as we have seen, came into the hands of Nisbet, who set to work at its transcription into language more intelligible and familiar to his countrymen.

The following passage will give a fair idea of the relation of the three vernacular versions to each other and to the Latin :—

VULGATE, Mt. iv. 18.

Ambulans autem Jesus juxta mare Galilææ, vidit duos fratres Simonem qui vocatur Petrus, et Andream fratrem ejus, mittentes rete in mare (erant enim piscatores). Et ait illis: Venite post me et faciam vos fieri piscatores hominum. At illi continuo, relictis retibus, secuti sunt eum. Et procedens inde, vidit alios duos fratres, Jacobum Zebedæi, et Joannem fratrem ejus, in navicula cum Zebedæo patre eorum, reficientes retia sua: et vocavit eos. Illi autem statim relictis retibus et patre, secuti sunt eum. Et circuibat Jesus totam Galilæam, docens in synagogis eorum, et prædicans evangelium regni, et sanans omnem languorem et omnem infirmitatem in populo. Et abiit opinio ejus in totam Syriam.

And his fame went in to al Sirie.

Note here as characteristics of the earlier version the awkward rendering of relictis retibus, the use of 'sotheli' for autem, and the occasional glosses. Purvey, on the other hand, shows almost as much dislike to a literal rendering of the present participle followed by a verb as to an ablative absolute. He will translate, for example, Mt. x. 7, Euntes autem predicate dicentes, 'And go ȝe, and preche ȝe, and seie.'

The language of Nisbet, closely following Purvey as he does, is not altogether such as we should have obtained from a Scot making his own independent translation. When English words used by Purvey are quite intelligible north of the Tweed, Nisbet is inclined to make no change. For example, the common Scottish words speir, for 'ask' or 'inquire,' and thole, for 'suffer,' do not once occur in the three Gospels here printed. Quintin Kennedy naturally translates sciscitabatur ab eis (Mt. ii. 4), 'he sperit at thame'; but Nisbet, having Purvey's 'enqueride of hem' before him, as naturally follows with 'inquirit of thame.' Compare, too, Nisbet's 'Suffir ye litil childire to cum to me' (Mark x. 14) with Archbishop Hamilton's 'Thoile young barnis to cum to me.' On the other hand, Nisbet prefers some few common Scotticisms, as, e.g., 'mirk,' even though the corresponding English word 'derk,' as in Purvey, would have been quite intelligible.

This close adhesion to the English, as a rule, where change is unnecessary, brings, however, into greater relief words and phrases which Nisbet habitually rejects as evidently unknown or unfamiliar to his countrymen, as 'clepid' for 'called,' 'sue' for 'follow,' 'nyle ye' for 'wil ye nocht,' and scores of others of less frequent occurrence.

But if Nisbet's vocabulary takes a certain colour from the English of Purvey, the construction of his sentences, his grammar, and occasionally too his choice of words, are often determined by the Latin which is at the basis of Purvey. For although Purvey improved considerably upon the earlier Wycliffe, he by no means freed his translation from traces of the Latin original. Professor Skeat instances a number of words and phrases which would puzzle the reader if he does not think of the Latin. Thus we have 'temporal' for temporalis, Mt. xiii. 21; 'casteles' for castella=towns, Mark vi. 6; 'cofyne' (coffins) for cophinos=baskets, Mt. xiv. 20; 'litol kyng' for regulus=nobleman or king's officer, John iv. 46; 'make me saaf' for salvum me fac, Mt. xiv. 30; 'and it was doon' for et factum est, Mt. xi. 1; 'he baar heuy' for indigne tulit, Mark x. 14, &c. Virtutes is continually translated 'virtues' where it should be 'miracles' or 'powers,' as virtutes cælorum, 'the vertues of heuenes,' Mt. xxiv. 29. Plural forms with singular significations are translated as plurals—

e.g., tenebræ, 'derknesses' (Nisbet 'mirknessis'). Quid=why? is continually rendered 'what.'

In some respects Purvey's version, though obviously smoother English than that of his predecessor, is less exact. Wycliffe's version clumsily reproduces every particle in its place, but Purvey as frequently loses point and emphasis by disregarding them altogether. In a score of passages, for quidam, as in homo quidam, 'a certain man,' Purvey writes 'a man,' Wycliffe 'sum man' (see note at p. 235). A more important omission is the disregard of et= 'even' or 'also.' Thus in Mt. v. 46, nonne et publicani hoc faciunt, 'do not even the publicans do this,' Wycliffe characteristically translates 'whether and puplicans don nat this thing,' but Purvey 'whether puplicans doon not this.' Compare also Mt. xxvi. 69, Et tu cum Jesu Galilæo eras, 'Thou also wast with Jesus,' &c. Here again Wycliffe has 'And thou were with Jhesu,' and Purvey simply 'Thou were,' &c.

Generally speaking, the merits and defects of Purvey as a translator—and his merits are many—are all reproduced by Nisbet. The work of the latter is in no sense a revision either of the English version or of the Latin text. It is simply a transcript of Purvey's English into Scots. If the same Latin word occurs thrice in a passage, and Purvey happened to vary his rendering of that word on its third occurrence, Nisbet faithfully follows.¹ On the other hand, if Purvey, in order to make the sense of a sentence clearer, inserts a word not in the Latin and underscores it to show that he has done so, Nisbet, ignoring the underscoring, copies the word as part of the text. He follows Purvey's accidental mistakes and omissions. It may be doubted if Nisbet had a copy of the Vulgate by his side to serve as a check upon the English version. At least the deviations from the accepted text of Purvey are so rare that they may be rather set down to the peculiar readings of the particular copy of Purvey's version which Nisbet had in use. That, unfortunately, cannot be recovered. Yet some of these apparent departures from Purvey's readings or renderings deserve notice. Nisbet correctly substitutes 'glorie' for 'ioye' in the strange reading found in every known copy of Purvey's version in Mt. iv. 8: 'All the rewmes of the world and the ioye of hem.' On the other hand, in Mt. xii. 20, he incorrectly substitutes 'brand,' found in no existing MS. of either Purvey or Wycliffe, for 'flax'; and he interpolates, in Mt. ix. 25, the words, 'and said, Rise, damycele,' which is found in the margin only of a single MS., and that of the earlier version. He sometimes surprises us with a difference of translation, such as 'be dronkin' for inebriari, where the existing MSS. of the English versions read apparently without variation 'be fillid (or fulfillid) ouer mesure' (Luke xii. 45); or again, 'I sal refresch you' for Purvey's 'Y schal fulfille 3ou' (Mt. xi. 28); but here Wycliffe had 'I shal refreshe, or fulfille 3ou.' It indeed frequently happens that a departure of this sort from Purvey is in the direction of Wycliffe, so as to suggest that Nisbet's copy of Purvey was one that had been in parts mixed with or corrected by the earlier version.

The Latin
Vulgate.

The Vulgate New Testament as we now have it is an old Latin translation, provincial or African in its character, revised by St Jerome with the use of Greek MSS., which in his day were considered ancient. In its pure state it agrees rather with the Greek text of our best critical editions than with that of our so-called Received text; and it may be remarked that when the Revised Anglican version differs in reading from the Authorised version of 1611, the Vulgate will frequently be found in agreement with the former. But in course of time, as was inevitable in the case of a text so frequently copied, it became corrupt. An early source of error was the mixing of the new version with the pre-Hieronymian or unrevised 'Old Latin.' Attempts were made from time to time to secure a correct and uniform text, notably by Alcuin on the initiation of Charlemagne, circa 800, and about the same time, less successfully, by Theodulf, Bishop of Orleans, and later again by Archbishop Lanfranc and Stephen Harding. These works were confined to a limited area, or had little permanent effect. The errors of copyists continued to increase, and the well-meant intentions to correct them sometimes resulted in greater confusion as the more learned scholars would attempt to amend the Latin by the Greek, or what they believed to be the Greek.

A new departure was made in the thirteenth century, when certain religious orders or communities of scholars compiled Correctoria, or lists of variants, with the authorities for them. The best of these, and one founded on more scientific principles than the rest, seems to have been the 'Correctorium Vaticanum,' so called because the first discovered copy of it was found in the Vatican Library. But a more famous and more popular work of this kind was that attributed to the University of Paris. The Paris Bibles were supposed to be the result of the careful revision of the best theologians. Unfortunately this was far from being the case. As Roger Bacon long ago complained, they were the work mainly of the stationers—booksellers' editions got up for sale, supplying, apparently, the favourite readings of students from all parts; but they largely influenced the current text, owing their popularity in part, perhaps, to the fact that in these Bibles the convenient divisions of our modern chapters were first adopted.

After the invention of printing, copies of the Vulgate were multiplied in every quarter at haphazard—the first manuscript which came to hand being taken as an exemplar. One hundred and twenty-five editions were printed before the year 1500. The editions printed at Basle by Froben in 1491 and 1502 are said to be exceptionally good, but the first scholar to produce anything like a critical edition was Robert Stephens (1st edit. 1538, and 2nd in 1546). The edition of 1546, in which Stephens made use of several ancient MSS., though he attached too much value to the 'Correctorium Parisiense,' is practically, says Mr Miller¹ in his excellent account of the Latin version, 'the foundation of the modern Vulgate.' The Council of Trent, April 1546, while declaring the Vulgate as a version to be authentic and decreeing its exclusive use, recognised the confusion which existed in the variety of copies, and directed that means should be taken to have it printed with the greatest possible accuracy. Forty years passed, however, before the various measures taken at Rome to carry out this decree produced any tangible result. Meanwhile, in 1547, the learned Dominican John Hentenius, Professor of Theology at Louvain, brought out an edition, often reprinted, which became practically the standard edition used by theologians of the Roman Church. It was from a copy of this, the so-called Louvain Bible, that the Rhemish New Testament was translated in 1582.

At last, in 1589, a commission of scholars appointed by Pope Sixtus V. (1585-90), and presided over by Cardinal Carafa, presented the results of their labours to the Pope, who in the following year published the Bible in 3 vols. folio, accompanying it with a bull declaring this to be the authentic edition recommended by the Council of Trent, and ordering all copies to be conformed to it. But the Pope, who himself took a special interest in Biblical studies, did not print the text as the Carafa commission intended it, but revised their work throughout with his own hand. The edition gave great dissatisfaction in certain quarters, and on the death of Sixtus, which took place a few months after the issue of his Bible, in 1590, it was recalled, and a new congregation was appointed to make a further revision by Gregory XIV., who (after the few days' reign of Urban VII.) had succeeded to the Papacy (8th Oct. 1590). At last, in 1592, Clement VIII. issued a new edition, which differed from that of his predecessor in some 3000 readings. This Clementine Bible is the official standard and exemplar with which all modern copies should agree, and no attempt has been made within the Roman Church to improve the text, though individual scholars have done much to elucidate its history.¹

Mr Skeat reminds us that 'the Vulgate version of the Bible is one of the most important books in the world,' and J. D. Michaelis long ago remarked that 'as a version of the Scriptures it excelled all others.'² Yet, according to M. Berger, one of the highest authorities on the subject, the Vulgate is still, or was in 1887, 'the worst edited and the least known work of Latin literature.'³

Undoubtedly the ultimate revision of the text under the Gregorian commission of 1590-91 was somewhat hastily done. The Carafa congregation had endeavoured to recover the text as Jerome had left it. The changes of Sixtus V. were not as arbitrary as has been sometimes supposed. The actual errors of the press in his edition

¹ An account of what was done by the several papal congregations since the Council of Trent for the emendation of the text will be found in 'Prælectiones de Nov. Test. et Historia Vulgatæ editionis a Concilio Tridentino auctore A. M. Ungarellio' (ed. Vercellone), Romæ, 1846, reprinted in the Prolegomena to Vercellone's own unfinished work, 'Variæ lectiones Vulgatæ Latinæ biblicorum editionis,' Romæ, 1860. The state of the text in the early Middle Ages is described by Samuel Berger in his 'Histoire de la Vulgate pendant les premiers siècles du moyen âge.' Paris, 1893.

³ 'De l'Histoire de la Vulgate en France' (Paris, 1887), p. 16. On the other hand, Ernest Ranke in his 'Codex Fuldensis' (Marburgi, 1876, p. 569) gave a more favourable estimate of the Clementine edition, pronouncing it to be in universum satis bonum . . . textum, neque absimilem a fontibus authenticis. In 1889, however, there issued from the Oxford press the first portion of the long-desired work, now in course of publication, by the Bishop of Salisbury, in collaboration with the Rev. J. H. White: 'Novum Testamentum . . . Latine secundum editionem S. Hieronymi ad codd. manusccriptorum fidem recensuit Johannes Wordsworth,' &c. The Four Gospels have already appeared; and here for the first time are collected the readings of all the most ancient MSS. by which the genuine Hieronymian text can as nearly as possible be restored. It has been used with every line of the present volume.

were fewer than in that of Clement. But Sixtus was reluctant to make changes where changes seemed unnecessary. He leant towards the consuetudo ecclesiastica, the ecclesiastical 'use and wont,' favouring readings which were established in the Bibles in current use for many centuries. An example of this conservative tendency may be found in his preference of evertit for everrit in Luke xv. 8 (see the note on the passage, p. 258). The Clementine edition by no means restored the Carafian readings, but rather fell back, according to their instructions, upon the text of the Louvain Bibles of Hentenius, which it closely resembles. On the other hand, it has been remarked by Wordsworth and White that the readings of the Sixtine edition, when they differ from the Clementine, very frequently agree with the edition of Robert Stephens.

M. Berger, after examining a typical example of the so-called Parisian Bible, dated 1270, has calculated that, without counting isolated words and faulty readings, it contained altogether an amount of interpolated matter equivalent to 100 verses; and that of these, 82 verses, or four-fifths, are found in the Sixtine edition, and 74, or three-fourths, in the authorised edition of Clement.¹ This of course refers to the whole Bible, and not to the New Testament only.

The differences between the two papal editions, and the relation of both to the later medieval or Parisian text, have some interest in connection with the present work. It will be frequently found that where the Latin text at the basis of Purvey and Nisbet differs from that of the present Vulgate, it will agree with the text represented by Stephens and Sixtus V. On the whole, it seems to have been a carefully selected text, perhaps nearly as good a text as it was possible to obtain in the circumstances, and it certainly bears evidence of the diligence which Purvey claims to have taken in its preparation.¹ In his Prologue he warns his readers that if they would judge fairly of the translation they must first examine carefully and prove their Latin text, for undoubtedly they will find many Bibles in Latin 'ful false,' especially the newer ones; and he adds that 'the comune Latyn biblis han more nede to be correctid as manie as I haue seen in my lif, than hath the English bible late translatid.'

This much it has seemed necessary to say in explanation of the method adopted in the footnotes. Here all the substantial differences between the English of Purvey and the Scots of Nisbet are set down, and, as a rule, in such cases, or wherever the Scots may be better understood by a reference to the Latin, this is given also. Where the Latin read by Purvey differs from the present Vulgate, an attempt has been made, as a rule, to indicate whether it does so with any authority, or at least to show on which side are ranged the chief editions—i.e., those of Stephens, Hentenius, Sixtus, and Clement. The renderings of the earlier Wycliffite and later Rhemish versions are occasionally added, and as examples of other Scottish translations, the vernacular citations from Archbishop Hamilton's Catechism, Gau's 'Richt Vay,' and generally of the Roman Catholic controversialists of the sixteenth century, such as Quin-

Fidelity of the English translation.

A word may be said of Purvey's fidelity as a translator in the light of a novel theory recently set forth by the Rev. A. Gasquet, O.S.B., in an interesting article which first appeared in the 'Dublin Review' of July 1894, and was afterwards reprinted, with a second paper on the same subject, in a volume entitled 'The Old English Bible and other Essays' (1898). Father Gasquet, with much ingenuity, endeavoured to prove that all the copies of the Wycliffite and Lollard Bibles have perished, and that all the existing MSS., commonly ascribed to Wycliffe or Purvey, are in reality orthodox Catholic versions sanctioned, or at least tolerated, by ecclesiastical authority. His arguments in favour of his main contention need not be discussed in detail here. He has not, in the opinion of his critics, in the least shaken the evidence in favour of the traditional attribution of both versions to Wycliffe's school; nor has he adduced any valid grounds for the supposition that such a thing as a Catholic authorised version was in existence at this period.¹ Nevertheless, Father Gasquet's inquiries have not been without fruit. He has brought out prominently a series of facts the significance of which had not hitherto been recognised. He points out that a number of finely executed copies were possessed and highly prized by orthodox princes, priests, and religious.

¹ See a criticism of Father Gasquet's theory, in an article entitled "The Authorship of the Wycliffite Bible," in the 'English Historical Review' for Jan. 1895, by F. D. Matthew; also 'The English Church in the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Centuries,' by W. W. Capes (Lond. 1900), pp. 126-131; and 'Our Bible and the Ancient Manuscripts,' by F. G. Kenyon (3rd edit., 1897), pp. 199-208.

A copy which was the property of Henry VI. was by him bestowed upon the monks of the London Charterhouse. Another has the royal arms of Henry VII. A third copy is shown to have belonged to the Abbey of Barking in Essex, and indeed it appears to have been written by one of the nuns. Another MS. of the version attributed to Wycliffe was the property of Katherine Methwold, a nun. In 1394 a copy of the Gospels in English was bequeathed to the chantry of St Nicholas, York, by John Hopton, chaplain. In 1517 a New Testament was given to the Convent of Our Lady of Syon by Dame Anne Danvers, the widow of Sir William Danvers. Other instances of the kind might be cited. There is even an example of what looks like a formal permission to read such versions, if indeed an inscription, in a copy of the New Testament according to the later version, is rightly interpreted by Father Gasquet. It is in a hand of the fifteenth century, now partially erased, and is thus deciphered by Forshall and Madden (vol. i. p. lxiii), 'A lytel boke of viii l. vj. s. viii. d. and hit a holy man was over seyne, and redd be Doctor Thomas Ebb . . all and Doctor Ryve my modir bought hit.' Such facts as these do not, indeed, prove that the versions in question were not Wycliffite in origin, but they do undoubtedly bear important testimony to the strict fidelity of the translations. They further show that there was no such universal opposition, as has been often supposed, on the part of the English Church authorities to the use of the Scriptures in the vernacular by trustworthy persons. In the early days of the Wycliffe movement, when the party was supported by rich and powerful friends, costly copies of the Bible would be not uncommon. These, when not accompanied by Lollard prologues or compromising notes, would easily pass into the hands of orthodox nobles, or even priests and nuns, among whom a general desire to read the Scriptures was spreading. Father Gasquet bears witness to the absence of any taint of heresy in the text. Such books, then, would raise no suspicion; and permission to read them, if required, could be obtained without difficulty from certain bishops or confessors. These copies, moreover, would have a better chance of surviving than others found in possession of known Lollards, or marked as heretical by glosses and notes. Father Gasquet indeed says, 'In no case, as far as I can discover, has any copy been traced to a possessor of distinct Lollard opinions.' The evidence of such possession is not likely to be paraded. But it must be remembered that there is in the Bodleian Library a copy of the Old Testament in the earlier version (transcribed from the original MS. of the translator, also in the Bodleian), which has a note assigning that translation, as far as the book of Baruch, to Nicholas of Hereford, one of the leaders of the Lollards of Oxford. There is, again, at Dublin, a volume of the New Testament in this same earlier version bearing the name of Purvey as its former possessor, and in this volume Purvey has, in his own handwriting, supplied the prologues of the later version (Forshall and Madden, vol. i. p. xxv). Moreover, here, in the case of Nisbet's copy of the later version, we have proof enough of the book having been owned by an undoubted Lollard.¹

¹ In this connection may be noted the tradition that the Gordons of Earls-toun 'entertained the Disciples of Wickliff and had a New Testament in the

Besides the fidelity and orthodoxy of these versions, Father Gasquet finds internal evidence of their Catholic origin in the fact that many copies are marked with the Epistles and Gospels read in the churches according to the Sarum Use, or have at the end of the volume tables of such lessons. But Wycliffe, who continued rector of Lutterworth to the end of his life, could only regard these tables, or indications of the Church lessons, as a convenience to his disciples; and when once such a custom was adopted, it would be continued mechanically, even when the parish churches were no longer frequented by the Lollards. We have an example of this practice in the present volume. Nisbet adds, at the end of the New Testament, a collection of lessons from the Old Testament, which he thus introduces: 'Heir followis the Epistles of the Auld Testament quhilk ar red in the kyrk aponne certane dayes of the yeir,' and among these occur the lessons for the 'secund messe' and the 'thrid messe' on Christmas Day.

There are versions of the Bible which show distinctive marks of their Protestant origin, and others which as distinctively betray a Roman Catholic authorship; but the Vulgate may be said to belong to no particular Church or creed. It was made at a time anterior to the main theological differences which have divided Christendom, and the accretions which it has absorbed in the course of time have less the character of theological glosses than have those of the received Greek text.¹ So it may be said of Purvey's version that,

Vulgar Tongue which they used to read in Meetings in the Woods about Earls-toun House' (Wodrow's 'Sufferings of the Church,' vol. ii. pp. 67, 68).

¹ For example, the ascetical habit of mind has introduced into the received though the translator was a disciple of Wycliffe, his text bears no trace of theological bias. It was a very literal, very honest English reproduction of the Vulgate of his day; and Nisbet's Scottish recension is, in turn, no less honest and faithful.

In editing the MS. all abbreviations have been extended: y is printed for ȝ, and th for the obsolete contraction ȝ. Capitals have been used for proper names, and the verses have been numbered according to modern usage.

To Lord Amherst of Hackney the Society is greatly indebted not only for the facilities afforded by his lordship, for the transcription of the MS. in the first instance at the British Museum by Mr Hughes Hughes, but for his kindness in subsequently placing the volume under the care of Mr Gordon Duff and Mr Guppy in the John Rylands Library, Manchester, that the proof-sheets might be there collated by Mr Joseph Hall, who has most generously devoted much time and trouble for this purpose. The facsimile of the folio 105 v., which stands as a frontispiece to the volume, was also presented to the Society by Lord Amherst.

The skill and experience of Mr Hall in dealing with medieval MSS. have enabled him to decipher many words in the prologue and in the marginal notes, which were partly effaced or obliterated by abrasure of the leaves. He has read the proofs at least twice throughout with the MS., and has supplied the diplomatic notes on the Greek 'fasting' as an adjunct to 'prayer' in 1 Cor. vii. 5 and Acts x. 30, where there is no such reference to fasting in the Vulgate or the best Greek MSS. 'In the New Testament, at all events,' writes the Rev. W. F. Moulton ('History of the English Bible,' 2nd ed., p. 29), 'the Vulgate is often nearer to the sense of the sacred writers than are many of the later manuscripts of the Greek Testament.'

state of the text; and although he is in no way responsible for either the matter or form of my own notes, I have to acknowledge my indebtedness to him for many corrections and suggestions as the proofs passed under his eye. It is hoped that Mr Hall will be able to contribute to the third volume some remarks on the linguistic peculiarities of the text.

My thanks are also due to Mr Gordon Duff, Mr Henry Guppy, Mr Archibald Constable, Dr David Patrick, and Mr W. A. Craigie for kind help in various directions.

A PROLOGE TO THE NEW TESTAMENT.

LYKE AS THE ALD TESTAMENT IS A BUKE QUHERIN¹ is writtin not onli the law and commandmentis of God, bot also the actis and dedis

¹ The greater part of this prologue (down to "ettir this fassi[ounn]," p. 5) is a literal translation of the preface to Luther's New Testament. The preface to Luther's first edition (Wittenberg, 1522), and other early editions (Basel, 1522; Strassburg, 1524; Augsburg, 1529), begins with the words "Es were wol recht und billich," and does not correspond with the opening of the Scots version until the middle of the second paragraph, "gleich wie," &c. But in Luther's edition of the whole Bible (Wittenberg, 1534), and in subsequent editions, his preface to the New Testament begins and continues literally as in the Scots version, thus :—

"Gleich wie das alte Testament ist ein buch, darinnen Gottes gesetz vnd gebott, daneben die geschichte, beide derer, die dieselbigen gehalten und nit gehalten haben, geschriben sind. Also ist das neue Testament ein buch, darinnen das Evangelium vnd Gottes verheissung, daneben auch geschichte, beide derer, die daran glauben, und nit glauben, geschriben sind.

"Dann Evangelium ist ein Griechisch wort, und heisset auf Teutsch, gute botschaft, gute mähre, gute neue zeitung, gut geschrey, davon man singet, saget und frölich ist. Gleich als da David den grossen Goliath vberwand, kam ein gut geschrey und tröstliche neue zeitung vnder das jüdische volck, dass ihr gewrelicher feind erschlagen, und sie erlöset, zu freude vnd fride gestellt weren, davon sie sunen vnd sprungen vnd frölich waren."

Luther concludes as follows :—

"Das meinete auch Christus, da er zur letze kein ander gebott gab, dann die liebe, daran man erkennen solte, wer seine jünger weren vnd rechtschaffene gläubigen. Dann wo die werck vnd liebe nicht herauss bricht, da ist der glaube nicht recht, da haftet das Evangelium noch nicht, vnd Christus ist nicht rechte erkant. Sihe, nun richte dich also in die bücher des neuen Testaments, dass du sie auf dise weise zu lesen wissest."

The first half of this preface of Luther's was also embodied by Tyndale in the 'Prologge' prefixed to the fragment of the New Testament printed by him in 1525. Tyndale's version of the passage above quoted may be compared with that of Nisbet :—

"The olde testament is a boke, where in is wrytten the lawe and commaundmentes of god, and the dedes of them which fulfill them, and of them also which fulfill them nott.

"The newe testament is a boke where in are coteyned the promyses of god, and the dedes of them which beleue them or beleue them nott. Euangelion (that we baithe of thame that haif kept the same and of those that haif not

For Euangelion is a Greke word, and is alsmekill to say in Inglis as a gude message, gude newis, gude mery tithingis, or sic a confort-abill word as makis a man to syng, to be glaid, and his hart to leape for joy; lyke as quhen Daid had ourecum grete Goliath thar come a Mairour he promist vnto Dauid ii. Regum vii. saying : I will [eft]ir the raiss vp thi sede, quhilk sall cum of thi body : his k[ingdom]e will I stable, he sall buyld ane houss for my [name an]d I will stable the sete of his kingdome for e[vir]; I sall be] his fadir and he sall be my sone, &c. [T]his² is the kingdome of Christ, quherof the [gospell sayis it is] a[n]e euirlasting kingdome, [a kingdome of lyf, of blis and F. 2 r. of rychtuousnes quharin cummis vt of the presonn of synn and de]ith [all thame that beleve in him]. S[a evin are the pro]mis[is] of the gospell [in mony of th]e prophetis, as in the fift chapter of Micheas, [and tho]w Bethleem Ephrata art litill among the thousandis of Ju[da], out of the sall thar cum ane vnto me quhilk salbe the gouv[ernour] [in] Israell. Item in the xiiij. chapter of Osee. O deithe, I wilbe [thi] deithe, &c.

Thus is the Gospell now nothing ellis bot a preching of Christ, the sone of God and of Dauid, trew God and man, quhilk with his deithe and resurrectiounn has for our sakis ourcum deith and hell and the synnis of all thame that put thair traist in him : Sa that the Gospell may be callit a schort or lang oratioun of Christ, for ane may discribe it schortlie and with few wordis, and ane vthir may discribe it at lenth. He discribith it at lenth that writis [m]ony workis and wordis of Christ as the four Euangilistis do : Bot he discrivis it schortlie that spekis not mekill of Christis workis and miraclis, bot declaris with few wordis how He be his deith and Resurrectiounn hes ourcum syn, deith and hell for all thame that [bel]eve in him. As Peter and Paul do.

Take thow gude heid therefor that thow make not of Christ [M]oses, nothir of the Gospell the law, as men haif done in tymes [p]ast. For thoct the Gospell condempne not rycht gude workis, yit [do]is it not require our workis for ony sic intent that we suld be made rychttuous or sauit be thame. The contrariewis it rather [r]equyris thame becaus we are sauit all redy. Bot speciallie it [s]ettis furth the faith in Christ, and prouokis menn to beleve onn him, namelie that he for our sakis has ourcum syn, deith and hell, and sa restorit ws vnto rychttuousnes and life and savit ws not be our werkis bot throw his avin workis, evin be his deith and passiounn. In sa mekile that we may be als bald of his deith and victorie as thoct we had done it oure selfis.

Quhare as Christ now in the Gospell and Peter alsa and Paul [in tha]r epistlis geif mony commandmentis and doctrinis and expone [the la]w, esteme thou that lyke¹ as all vthir workis and benefitis [of] Christ. And lyke as to know his workis and actis is not [yit] the ryct knowlege of the Gospell, for tharby knawis thou not [yit] that he has ourcum syn, deith and hell and the dewill, evin sa [is that nocht yit the rycht vnd]irstanding of the Gospell, thoct [thou knaw sic doctrinis and law; bot quhan the voce] cummis that sayis Christ is [thin, wit lyf and lare and wer]kis, deith, resurrectiounn and al th[at he is, hes, dois and is able] to do.

Bot Moses in his bukis dryvis, compellis, threatnis, [bet]tis and punnyssis sore, for he is a writare of the law, and [the] executare of the same. As for him that belevis thar is na [law] gevin vnto him, as saint Paul sayis, Tim. i. becaus that [be] faith he is made rychttuous, restorit vnto life and savit. No[ither] has he neid of ony thing els, bot to declare this faith [wit] sic gude christin workis as God has commandit him.

MATHOU¹ that was of Jude, as he is set first in ordour of the euangelistis, sa he wrate first the euangel in Jude. And fra the office of a tolgaderare he was callit to Gode. Quhen this Mathou had prechit the euangel in Jude and wald ga to hethin men, he wrate first the euangel in hebrew and left it into mynd to cristinmen of the Jewis, fra quhilk he departit bodilie: For as it was neidful that the euangel war prechit to the confermyng of faith, sa it was niedful that it war writin alsa aganis heretikis. Thouch mony men haue writin the euangel, foure anly, that is Matheu, Marc, Luke and Johne has the witnessing of the autorite. For thai tell the faith of the Trinite be iiij partis of the warlde. And thai ar as iiij quheles in the iiij horsit cart of the Lord that beris him about be preching of the euangel. And mankynd that was slane be iiij deidis suld be quiknit be the prechyng of thame. And tharfor the euangellis of vther writiris fel down and ar nocht resauet. For the Lord wald nocht that the forsaid novmer war destroyit² for the virtue of sacrament. Als the foure euangelistis ar vndirstandin be iiij figuris of spirituale priuite. Matheu is vndirstande be man, for he duellis principalie about the manhede of Crist. Marc is vndirstand be a lioun for he tretis of³ Cristis rising agane. Luke is vndirstand be a calf, and tretis of presthede. Johne is vndirstand be ane egile and writis hieliar the sacramentis or haly priuiteis of the godhede.

Forsuthe Crist quham thir euangelistis descriuis was a man born of the virgin: he was a calf in offring or deing on the croce: he was a lionn in rising agane, and he was an egile in ascensioun. Or the manhede of Crist is signifyit in man: Presthede is signifiet in the calf. Realme is signifiet in the lioun, and the sacrament of godhede is signifiet in the egile: that is, be thir iiij bestis it is declaret that Jesus Crist is God and man, king and prest.

¹ The shorter prefaces in the Wycliffe Bibles resemble more or less closely the Argumenta found in the most ancient MSS. of the Latin Vulgate and in some of the first printed editions. These Argumenta, which are thought to be earlier than St Jerome's time, may be seen in Wordsworth and White's critical edition of the Vulgate. This prologue to St Matthew, however, agrees verbally with the old Latin prologue only in the first two or three lines, thus: "Mattheus ex Iudæis, sicut in ordine primus ponitur, euangelium in Iudæa primus scripsit, cuius vocatio ad dominum ex publicanis actibus fuit."

The reading supplied a favourite point to medieval commentators. The woman, in her eager search, not only swept her house, but turned it upside down. Cor. vat. (cent. xiii.) notes, 'puto quod hic debeat esse everrit, i.e., scopat. Græcus enim sonat idem cum eo quod habetur Mt. xii. scopis mundatum.' Hent. has evertit in the text, but everrit in the margin; and Rh. follows the latter, 'sweep the house.' The correct reading—for it is impossible to suppose that Jerome had written everrit, or had wittingly allowed it to pass, if such a reading had existed in the Old Latin before him—was finally restored by Clement. Yet it is curious to note that the old reading has again by a misprint crept into some more recent copies of the Vg., as, e.g., that of Paris (typis Jacobi Vincent) 1741, 8°. PREFATORY NOTE.

CIRCUMSTANCES, which would have caused considerable delay in the progress of this work had I kept it entirely in my own hands, have led me to avail myself gladly of the generous offer of Mr Joseph Hall to complete for me the Annotations, on the lines which had been already laid down.

It must be observed, therefore, that the Notes in the present volume, from the beginning of ii. Corinthians, are almost entirely from the hand of Mr Hall, who has added to the critical sources previously used by me many others of interest and value. As in the first volume, Mr Hall is responsible for the text.

The abbreviations, indicating the several codices of the Latin text, or the patristic and medieval writers, occasionally referred to, hardly need explanation; but as these authorities (though some of them may be quoted but once) comprise an almost complete apparatus criticus for the study of the Latin text of the Epistles, the list which follows may be found useful.

John.

THIS is Johne euangelist, aan of the disciplis of the F. 85 v.

Lord, quhilk is a virgin chosen of God, quham God callit fra the spousalis quhen he wald be weddit. And doubile witnes of virginitee is gevin to him in the euangell in this, that he is said luvit of God before vthere disciplis. And our Lord, hangand on the croce, betaucht his moder to him in keping, that a virgine suld kepe a virgine. This Johnne in the euangele beginnis allaan the work of vncorruptabile worde, and witnessis that the kyndly sonn of God is made man, and that licht was nocht takin of mirknessis. And he schewis the first miracle quhilk God did at the weddingis, to schew quhare the Lord is prait to the feest the wyne of the weddingis aucht to failye; that quhen ald thingis ar changet al new thingis that ar ordanyt of Crist appere. Johnne wrate this euangele in Asie, eftir that he had writtin the Apocalips in the Ile of Pathmos. Neuirtheles, he wrate the euangele eftire all euangelestis, that alsa ane vncorruptibile end be a virgine in the Apocalips to him to quham ane vncorruptibile beginnyng is gevin in Genesis, in the begynnyng of halie scripture; for Crist in the Apocalips sais, I am the beginnyng and the end. And this Johne is he that knew that the day of his departing was cummin. And he callit togiddir his disciplis in Ephesie, and schewit Crist be mony previngis of myraciles; and yede doun into a doluen place of his berysing. And quhen he had made prayer he was put to his fadris, and was als mekile without sorow of deid as he is fundin cleen fra corruptioun of flesch. (a)

(a) The Latin original of this prologue, which is substantially that found in both Wy. and P., appears in many early printed editions of the Vulgate, and is frequently but erroneously attributed to St Jerome. It is assigned by WW. (p. 485) to an earlier age.

i. 1. at God: apud Deum. God was the word: so Wy., P., and Rh.; Deus erat verbum. Gau (p. 37), 'The word wesz in the beginning, and this word wesz with God, and this word wesz God, this word vesz in the beginning with God, al thing wesz maid be this word.'

3, 4. na thing. That thing that was made in him was lijf: P. (as printed by FM.), 'no thing, that thing that was maad. In hym was lijf,' in agreement with the modern division of AV.; and FM., strange to say, make no reference to any variation in the punctuation of their MSS. here. But undoubtedly many copies, both of Wy. and P., divide the clauses as above in Nisbet. Almost all ancient MSS. of the Vg., and the majority of printed editions, including St. and Sixt., divide the clauses thus: sine ipso factum est nihil. Quod factum est in ipso vita erat, &c. So Rh., 'without him was made nothing. That which was made in him was life,' &c. Clem. left the sense ambiguous, punctuating thus, nihil, quod factum est, in ipso vita erat (though ver. 4 is marked to begin with in ipso); but modern reprints generally point, 'est. In ipso,' &c. RV. places in the margin, as an alternative reading, 'was not anything made. That which hath been made was life in him,' in accordance with the critical editions of the Greek by Tregelles and Westcott and Hort.

5. mirknessis: P., 'derknessis'; tenebris.

7. into witnessing: in testimonium.

(a) The Prolouug is Nisbet's copy from Purvey's translation of the Argumentum of the MSS., which in Codex Amiatinus is as follows: 'Galatæ sunt Græci. Hi verbum veritatis prius [primum, Fuld.] ab apostolo acceperunt, sed post discessum eius temptati sunt a falsis apostolis, ut in legem et circumcisionem verterentur. Hos apostolus revocat ad fidem veritatis, scribens eis ab Epheso.'

i. 3. the Lord: so P. Wy., 'oure Lord,' with Vg., Domino nostro; but cod. Fuld., some MSS. of Alcuin's recension, and R. omit nostro.

5. honour and glorie: so Wy.; but P., 'worschip and glorie.' Vg., gloria. R., honor et gloria; probably derived from Romans xvi. 27.

Victorinus, extendens me secundum regulam, sector ad bravium, and cod. Claromont., me extendens secundum regulam, consequor ad bravium, point to an early difference of interpretation.

15. Tharfor quhaeuir we ar: so Wy., P. Vg., Quicumque ergo perfecti sumus. this thing: so P. Vg., et hoc. Wy., 'and that thing.'

16. that we vndirstande the sammin thing: ut idem sapiamus — a gloss interpolated in the Greek from Gal. vi. 16, Phil. ii. 2. and that we perfitelie duelle in the sammin reule: so Wy., P., adding ut as in cod. Demidov., et ut in eadem regula permaneatis, and spoiling the sense. Vg., et in eadem permaneamus regula. Rh. (omitting et with Hent.), 'let us continue in the same rule.' In Vg. regula also derives from a gloss of the Greek text. Some ancient authorities filled in the meaning differently: so cod. Boern., ut idem sapiamus aut idem sapere, huic ipsi convenire; cod. Claromont., verumtamen in quo pervenimus, in ipsum sapiamus ad hoc ipsum convenire; Ambros., et in eo ambulemus. RV., 'only, whereunto we have already attained, by that same rule let us walk.' Burne (f. 163), 'lat vs nocht depairt from the Reul of fayth, that ve may al say ane thing.'

17. wait ye: observe.

18. I wepand say: et flens dico.

19. dede: interitus. Wy., 'deeth, or perisching.' Rh., 'destruction.'

FIRST(a) it is to say quhy Paule, the apostil, in this epistil in writing kepis nocht his vsage, descriuand his name(b) or the dignitee of his ordour. This is the cause, that he, writing to thame that war(c) of circumcisioun [and] beleuet, wrate(d) as the apostile of hethin men, and nocht of Jewis. And he, knawand thar pride, and schawand his(e) awne humilitee, wald nocht put befor the desert of his office. And in like maner alsa Johnne, the apostile, for humilnes in his epistile for the sammin skill set nocht his name before. As it is said, the apostile send this epistile to the Hebreus, writtin in Hebrew tonng. And eftir the dede of Paule, the apostile, Luke the euangelist made it in Greke speche, haldand the vndirstanding and the ordour of it.

(a) The initial rubric is wanting in many MSS. of Purvey, as in Nisbet. The Argumentum in cod. Amiat. is: 'Imprimis dicendum est cur apostolus Paulus in hac epistula scribendo non servaverit morem suum, ut vel vocabulum nominis sui vel ordinis scriberet [describeret, R.] dignitatem. Hæc causa est quod ad eos scribens qui ex circumcisione crediderant quasi gentium apostolus et non Hæbræorum, sciens quoque eorum superbiam suamque humilitatem ipse demonstrans, meritum officii sui noluit anteferre. Nam simili modo jam [etiam, cod. Augiens.] Johannes apostolus propter humilitatem in epistula sua nomen suum eadem ratione non prætulit. Hanc ergo epistolam fertur apostolus ad Hebræos conscriptam hæbraica lingua misisse: cuius sensum et ordinem retinens Lucas evangelista post excessum beati apostoli [Pauli, added by cod. Augiens. and R.] græco sermone conscripsit [exposuit, R.; composuit, cod. Augiens. and the Gloss]. Nisbet, as usual, follows Purvey's translation closely.

(c) war of, &c.: Wy., correctly, 'that of circumcisioun hadde bileuyd,' and so some MSS. of P., 'that of circumcisioun bileueden,' but many insert 'weren,' as in Nis., and one adds 'and.'

(d) wrate: so P., but Wy., 'was.'

(e) his written above thar deleted.

PREFATORY NOTE.

FOR the preparation of this volume, with the exception of the Index of Words, the Society is indebted to Mr Joseph Hall, M.A., D.Litt, who, as a friend of the late Dr Law, gave valuable assistance in the earlier volumes, especially since December 1902, when he undertook the editing of the second volume by way of temporary relief to Dr Law in his illness. The Council would express their thanks to Mr Hall for enabling them to complete the text and annotation of the Amherst MS. They had desired to associate his name with that of Dr Law on the title-page of this volume, and they think it right to state that it is omitted by Mr Hall's express wish.

Readings from Codices not specified in the lists are mostly taken from Berger, and quotations from early writers, for whom no edition is given, are mostly drawn from Sabatier's notes. The editions of the Acts by Blass and Hilgenfeld, of S. James by Mayor, and of S. John's Epistles by Westcott, have also been utilised.

OF THE ACTES THE PROLOUUG.(a)

LVC of Antioche, of the natioun of Sirie, quhais prays-ing is tald in the vangele.(b) At Antioche he was a worthi man of leche craft, and eftirwart a discipile of Cristis apostillis, and folowit Paule(c) the apostile. He seruit God in maidinhede without blame;(d) and quhen he was iiij

(a) The Prolouug follows closely Purvey's 'prolog on the Dedis of Apostlis.' Codd. Fuld., Gigas alone have the Latin original; the introductions in codd. Cavens., Demidov. are different, the other codices with R. and the Gloss have none. The version in V., a typical early-printed Bible, is quoted here as resembling nearly what Wyclif translated: 'Lucas antiochensis natione syrus cuius laus in euangelio canitur, apud antiochiam medicine artis egregius et apostolorum christi discipulus fuit; postea usque ad confessionem paulum secutus apostolum, sine crimine in virginitate permanens deo maluit seruire. Qui septuaginta [LXXX. Fuld., Gigas] et quattuor annos etatis agens in bythinia obiit plenus spiritu sancto; quo instigante in achaie partibus euangelium scribens grecis fidelibus incarnationem domini fidei narratione ostendit, eundemque ex stirpe dauid descendisse monstrauit. Cui non immerito scribendorum actuum apostolicorum potestas in misterio [ministerio, Gigas] datur, ut deo in deum pleno et filio perditionis extincto, oratione ab apostolis facta, sorte dominice electionis numerus compleretur. Sicque paulus consummationem apostolicis actibus daret, quem diu contra stimulum [stimulos, Fuld.] calcitrantem dominus elegisset. Quod legentibus et requirentibus deum breui potius volui ostendere sermone quam prolixius aliquid fastidientibus prodidisse, sciens quod operantem agricolam oporteat primum de suis fructibus edere. Quem ita diuina subsecuta est gratia ut non solum corporibus sed etiam animabus eius proficeret medicina.'

(b) vangele: P., 'gospel'; Wy., 'euangeliye.'

(c) and folowit Paule: P., 'and suwede Poul'; Wy., 'aftir folowinge Poul anoon to confescioun, other the deeth.'

(d) He seruit, &c.: so P., but Wy., 'withoute blame dwellinge in maydenhod, chees to serue God.'

Gaast. In (a) the coostis of Achaie he wrote the gospele to faithfull Grekis, and schewit the incarnatioun of the Lord be a trew telling; and schewit also that he was cummin of the kinrede of Dauid. To him nocht without desert was gevin powere to write the doingis (b) of the apostilis in thare ministerie; that God being full in God quhen the son of perdition was dede, and the apostilis had made thar prayer, throu lot (or cauile) (c) of the Lordis electioun the novmer of the apostilis war fulfillit; and also that Paule suld end the doingis of the apostilis, quham the Lord had chosen, that lang tyme flang aganes the brod. (d) And to thame that redis and sekis God he wald schaw it be schort telling, rathir than schaw furth ony thing mare langare to thame that irkis with (e) langsum (f) thingis, knawand that it behuvis the telare that wirkis to ete of his awne fruitis. And he fand sa mekile grace of God that nocht aanly his medicine proffitit to bodijs, bot also to saulis.

(a) This title does not occur in any recorded copy of P., and it is probably a thoughtless addition of the rubricator. In some MSS. and in the early editions each of the Catholic Epistles has its brief Argumentum, but neither Wy. nor P. appears to have translated them. What Nis. copies here is called in the MSS. of P. either, 'a prolog on the pistlis of cristen feith,' or, 'Prologe on the smale pistlis,' or, 'The prolog of the vii. epistlis,' or simply, 'The prolog'; while in nine copies, as probably in Nisbet's original, there is no heading at all. The Latin generally has, 'Incipit prologus in septem epistolas canonicas.' It is wanting in cod. Amiat., but in Demid. it is as follows: 'Non ita [idem, R.] ordo est apud Graecos, qui integre sapiunt et fidem rectam sectantur, epistolarum septem quae canonicae nuncupantur, sicut [ut, Fuld.] in latinis codicibus inuenitur, quod [vt, V.] quia [omit Fuld.] Petrus primus [Fuld., R. add est] in numero apostolorum, primae sint etiam eius epistolae in ordine ceterarum. Sed sicut euangelia [euangelistas, Fuld., R.] dudum ad veritatis lineam correximus, ita has proprio ordini [ordine, Fuld.], deo nos iuuante, reddidimus. Est enim vna earum prima [prima earum una, Fuld.] Iacobi, Petri duae, Iohannis tres et Iudae vna. Quae si, vt ab eis digestae sunt, ita quoque ab interpretibus fideliter in latinum eloquium uerterentur, nec ambiguitatem legentibus facerent, nec sermonum sese varietas impugnaret, illo praecipue loco vbi de vnitate Trinitatis in prima Iohannis epistola positum legimus. In qua etiam ab infidelibus translatoribus multum erratum esse a fidei veritate comperimus, trium tantum modo vocabula, hoc est, aquae, sanguinis et spiritus in ipsa sua editione ponentibus, et patris verbique ac spiritus testimonium omittentibus, in quo maxime et fides catholica roboratur, et patris et filii et spiritus sancti vna diuinitatis substantia comprobatur. In ceteris vero epistolis quantum mea [nostra, Fuld.] ab aliorum distet editio lectoris prudentiae derelinquo. Sed tu, virgo Christi, Eustochium, dum a me impensius scripturae veritatem inquiris, meam quodammodo senectutem inuidiorum dentibus corrodendam exponis, qui me falsarium corruptoremque sacrarum pronunciant scripturarum. Wy., P. translate this famous passage (vv. 7, 8) in the current form of the xivth century, which was practically that adopted in the Vg. For the readings, see Westcott, The Epistles of St John, pp. 202-209. Vg., habet vitam. of God: Wy., P., on the second occasion of their occurrence in this verse, put these words in italics; but Dei is added by St., Sixt., Hent., codd. (a) The Apocalypse is without preface in cod. Amiat. and R., while codd. Tolet. and Cavens. have one peculiar to themselves. The short prologue beginning Iohannes apostolus et euangelista a Domino Christo electus et dilectus, found in codd. Demid., Fuld., Gigas, Lips. 4, 5, 6, and the Gloss, and printed by Thomasius in whole or part from three other MSS., is that which is translated in MSS. of Wy. only. The longer prologue, here copied by Nis., is peculiar to P.; the still longer Latin original is ascribed to Gilbertus Pictaviensis (Gilbert de la Porrée, born at Poitiers, A.D. 1070) in the folio Bible printed by Rusch at Strasburg in 1480. The first portion of it, as translated by P., is also in some other early Bibles, as that printed at Rome by Sweynheym and Pannartz in 1471, and that of Frisner and Sensenschmidt at Nuremberg in 1475, the Complutensian Polyglot, and V.

In addition to these prologues, there is a brief Argumentum, not translated by Wy. or P.

(a) FM. describe twenty-four MSS. containing the whole or part of Purvey's New Testament and two of the earlier version, which have appended a collection of the Old Testament passages, read either for Epistola or as Lectioes in the celebration of the Mass according to the Use of Sarum. These collections were generally compiled from Purvey's version; rarely from Wy.; occasionally, as in Nisbet's original, both versions were drawn upon. The compiler conformed the extracts to the text of the Sarum Missal by small internal changes, and by adding a translation of the formal phrases which usually preface and conclude the lections in the Service Books. Where the lection is an adaptation from the Vulgate, as in xv., xx., xxv., the translation was made directly from the text of the Missal.

As these collections were not included in their critical material by FM., Nisbet's transcript is here compared throughout with the compilation in R. 3 (FM. 157; formerly Ashburnham MS. 2), of which the first leaf is wanting, and with w., the fragment of another, printed in Baber from the Pepys MS. (FM. 125), as well as with Wy., P. The Sarum Missal in various editions is specially quoted, as representing the Latin original, and incidental use is also made of such scanty materials as are available for the criticism of the Latin text of the Old Testament. The notes on each passage are headed by the date and title of the lection in the Sarum Missal. Wherever Nisbet's original does not derive directly from Purvey, its source is given.

The black letters placed in the margin at the beginning of many of the pieces were doubtless copied from Nisbet's original. They occur with greater regularity in R. 3, and point to a division of the Vulgate text into sections much shorter than those in the early printed bibles.

How Paul
vair certen
wordis.

LAW.

F. 232 v.

The law of God requiris
luf.

First we monn marke diligently the maner of speikyng of the apostile, ande abone al thing know quhat Paul meniss 10 be thir wordis, the Lawe, Synne, Grace, Faith, Rychtwisnes, Fleische, Spreite, ande sicklik; or ellis, reide thow it neuir sa oft, thow sal bot tynne thy labour. This worde Lawe may not be vndirstande heir efter the common maner, ande, to vse Paulis termess, efter the maner of men, or efter mennis 15 tradicions or wayis; that thow suld say the lawe heir in this place war na thing bot a lernynge, quhilke teachit quhat awgtht to be dvnne, and quhat augtht not to be dunne, as it yeide with mennis lawe, quhair the law is fulfillit with outwart werkis only, thouth the hart be neuir sa far of. Bot 20 Gode judgit the grunde of the hart, yee, ande the thouthis ande the secreit movyngis of the mynde; and tharfor his law requiris the grownde of the hart, ande luf fra the bod- domme thair of, ande is not content with the outwart warke 25 only, bot repreiffis thair warkis maist of all quhilkis spryngis not of luf, fromme the boddomme ande lawe grownde of the hart, thouth thair appeir outwart neuir so honest ande gude. As Christ in the Gospell repreiffit the Phariseis abone al vthir that war opin synnaris, ande callit thamme ypocrites, 30 that is to say, symulars ande paynted sepulcres; quhilke Phariseis yit na man lewit mair cleynne, as perteynyng to the outwart warkis ande deidis of the lawe; ye, ande Paul,

1. onn: 'thorowe'; T 36, 'through.' 2. way thair into: 'waye in ther vnto.' 3. far: 'far forth.' 4. hiddirtillis: 'hetherto.' sa: added by the copyist. 7. yit: not in T., T 34, but T 36 and following editions have 'yet.' 9. in the thred chepture of his epistille to the Philippenses, confessit of him selfe that, as twychyng the law, he was sic anne man as na man coulde complaynne onn; ande, not withstanding, was yit anne murtherar of the christyanne, persecuted them and tormentede them sa sair that he compellit thamme to blasphemme Criste, ande was altogyddir mercyless, as mony quhilk now fenyeis outward gude warkis are.

For this cause the hundretht ande xxv Psal. callit all menn lyers, becauss that na mann keipit the lawe fra the grownde of his hart, nother cann keip it, thoth he appeir outwarde ful of gude warkis. For al men ar naturally jnclynit vnto ewill, ande haittis the law, we fynde in our selfis vnlust ande (a) dilectationn to do ewill. Now quhair na fre lust is to do gude, thair the boddomme of the hart fulfillit not the lawe, ande thair na doute is alsua synne, ande wraith is deservit befor Gode, thoutht thair be neuir sa greit anne outwart schawe ande apperance of honest lewing. F. 233 v.

For this cause, concludis Sanct Paull in the secunde chepture, that the Jewes ar all synnaris ande transgressoris of the law, thocht thai mak men belef, throw ypcrysy (b) off outwarde warkes, how that thai fulfill the law; ande sayis that he only quhilk dois the law is rychtwiss befor Gode, meanyng thairby that na man with outwarde warkes fulfillit the law. Thow (sayeth he to the Jewe) teachis a man suld nocht do adultery, ande yit thi self breakes thow maryage. Quhairin thou judgis anne nother mann, thairin condemniss thow thi self, for thow thi self dois ewin the warye sam thingis quhilk thow judgis. As thocht he wald say, Thou lewis outwartly weil in the warkis of the lawe, ande judgiss them that lewis not saa. Thou teachis other men, ande seis anne mote in another manis eye, bot art not ware of the beame that is in thi awin eye. For thoutht thow keip the law outwartly with warkes, for feare of repreiff, schamme, ande pwnyschment, outhir for luf of rewarde, wantage, ande waynne glore, yit dois thow all withtout lust ande luff to-warde the law, ande wald rather anne gret thing vthirwise do, gif thow dide not feare the lawe. Yit jnwardly in thi hart thou wald that thair war na law, na, nor yit Gode, the auctor ande awenger of the law, gif it war possibile; sua paynful it is vnto the to haue thine appetytes rafraneide 5 ande to be haldin downe.

Quhairfor than it is anne playnne conclusiounn, that thow fra the grownde ande boddomme of thi hart is anne enemye to the law. Quhat pravaileith it now that thow teachis another man not to steale, quhen thow thi self art 10 anne theife in thy hart, ande outwardly wald faynne stealle gif thow durste? PROSPERUS.

To fulfill quhat [it is].

F. 234 v.

To fulfill the law is to do the werkis of the law, ande quhat sa euir the law requiris and commandis, with luf, lust, ande jnwart affectiounn and delectatiounn; ande to leif godly ande weill, frely, willingly, ande without com-pulsionn of the law, ewin as thocht thair war na law at ony tymme. Sick lust ande fre liberte to the law cummis only be the wirking of the spret in the hart, as he saide in the first chapture. 15

The spreit

Now is the sprit nay vthirwise gewin than be faith anly, in that we beleif the promises of Gode without waweryng, 20
 how that Gode is trew, ande wil fulfill al his gude promises towarde us for Christis bludis saik, as it is playnne in the first chapture. I am not aschamed (sayis Paul) of Christis glaide tydyngis, for it is the power of Gode vnto saluatiounn to as mony as beleiffis. For at anis ande togiddir, ewin as 25
 we beleif the glaide tydyngis preached to us, the Haly Gaist enteris in our hartis ande lowsis the bandis of the dewill, quhilik befor possessed our hartis in captiuite, ande held thaim, that we culd not haue lust to the will of Gode in the law. And as the spreit cummis be faith only, 30

 Quhen we say faith bryngis the spreit, it is not to vnder-

SYNNE.

Synne in the scripture is not callit the outwarde wark only committit by the body, bot al that hail besiness, ande quhat sa euir accompanyeth, moweth, or steareth vnto the outwarde deide, ande that quhair fra the warkes spryngis, as vnbeleif, proness ande reddyness vnto the deide in the grownde of the hart, with all the powers, affectionns, ande appetites quhair with we can bot syn; sua that we saye that a man than synnyss, quhan he is cariede away headlonge in to synn, al togiddir in sa far as he is, of the poyson inclynatiounn ande corruptit nature, quhair in he was conceavit and borne. For thair is na outward syn commyttit, except a man be caryed away altogyddir, with lyf, saul, hart, body, lust, ande mynde thair vnto. The scripture lukis singularie vnto the hart, ande vnto the rutte ande originall fonttain of al syn, quhilk js vnbeleif in the boddomme of the hart. For as faith only justified ande bryngeth the spret and lust vnto the outwarde gude werkis, ewin sua vnbeleif onely dampneth ande keipit out the spreit, provoketh the fleische, ande stearis wp lust vnto ewill outwarde werkis, as happened to Adam ande Eua in Paradice, Gene. iii.

outwart, ande outwart fructes of faith, and of the spret quhilkis justifies not a man, bot that a mann is justified alreddy before Gode jnwartly in the hart, throw faith and throw the spret purchased be Christis blude.

Here with now stablischede Sanct Paull his doctryne 5 of faith affore rehersit in the threde chepture, ande bryngis the testimonye of Dauide in the eyghte Psal., quhilk he callis a mann blyssed, not off werkis, bot that his synn is not rekned, ande in that faith is jmputed for rychtwis-quhen he is aniss justified. For we ar justified, ande hes receavit the spret for to do gud werkes; nother wer jt vthirwise possibile to do gud werkes, except we had fyrst the spret.

For how is it possibile to do ony thing weil in the sycht 15 of Gode quhil we ar yit in captiuite ande bundage, vndir the dewill, ande the dewill possessinge ws all togyddir, ande halding our hartis sua that we can nocht aniss consent to the will of Gode? Na man can preveyne the spret in doynge gude; bot the spret mon first cum, ande walk him 20 out of his sleipe, and with the thwndyr of the law feare him, and schaw him his miserable estate and wreched-

In the xij chapture he giffis exhortationns. For this mannir obseruit Paull in all his epistillis; first he teachis Christ ande the faith, thann exhortis he to gude werkis, and vnto contynewall mortificatiounn of fleische. Sua heire 15

 Ande in conclusiounn, how to behaue our selfis baith towart 20
 Gode ande towart our selfis alsua. And all thingis ar profoundlye grunddit in the (c) scriptures, and declareth with exempilles of himself, of the faderis, ande of the propheetis, that a mann cann heir desire na maire. Quhairfor it apperis evidently that Paulis mynde was to comprehende brewitly 25 in this epistill all the haill lyearynyng of Christis gospel or ewangell, ande to prepare anne jntroductiounn to the auld testament; for without dout, quha sa euir hess this epistill perfity in his hart, the samme hes the lycht ande effecte of the auld testament with him. Quhairfor lat euiry mann, 30 without exceptiounn, excerse him self thairin diligently, ande recorde it nycht ande day continewally, vntill he

The last chapture is a chapture of recommendatiounn, quhairin [he] yit myngled anne gude monitiounn that we suld be war of the tradit[iounns] and doctrynn of menn, quhilkis begylis the sempyll with sophesty ande learnyng, 5 that is, nocht efter the gospell, ande drawis fra Christ, ande nosell them in the waik ande febill, and (as Paull callis thaim in the epistill to the Gallathianns) in beggerly ceremonyes; for the entent that thai wald lyue in fatte pastures, ande be in auctorite, ande be takin as Christ, 10 yee, ande abonne Christ, ande syt in the tempill of Gode, that is, to wit in the consciens of menn, quhair Gode only,

 haly spret, ande with all his gudnes, dueill in thy saull.

The summe ande haill cause of the writting of this epistill is to preif that man is justified by faith only: quhilk proposiciounn quha say denyit, to him is not only the epistill 20 ande al that Sanct Paull writ, bot alsua the hail scriptur sua lokit wp that he sal neur vndirstande it to his saulis helth. And to bryng anne mann to the vndirstanding ande felyng that faith only justified, Paul prophecyeth that the hail nature of mann is sua poysoned and sua corruppit, 25 yee, ande sua dead as concernyng godly lewyng or godly thinkyng, that it is impossible for hir to keip the law jn the sycht of Gode; that is to say, to luf it, ande of luf and desire do it, as naturally as a mann eattis or drynkkis, vntil sche be quykned agaynne ande hailed throw faith.
 30 And be justifying vndirstand na vthir thing than to be reconseled to God, ande to be restored vnto his fauoris, saik, his merites and deservingis only, receawis ws wnto

 his mercy, fauour, and grace, and forgiffis ws our synnes.
 And quhan I say Christ justifiis ws, vndirstande thairby that Christ only had redemyt us, boutht and delyuirit us out of the wraith of Gode [and] dampnatiounn, ande hade 5 with his werkis only purchesed us the mercy, the fauour, ande grace of Gode, ande the forgifness of our synnes.
 Ande quhan I say that faith only justifies, vndirstande thairby that faith ande traist in the truth of Gode, ande in the marcy promised us for Christis saike, ande for his 10 deserving ande werkis only, doth quiete the consciens ande certifye hir that our synnes be forgewin ande we ar jn the fauour of Gode.

Forthermaire, put befor thi eyne Christis werkis ande thi awin werkis. Christis werkis only justifies the, and 15 makis satisfiounn for thi synne, ande thi awinn werkis not; that is to say, quyetie thi consciens, ande mak the suire that thi (a) synnes ar forgiffin the, ande not thynne awin werkis. For the promyse of mercy js maide the for Christis werkis saik, ande nocht for thi awin werkis saik. 20
 Quhairfor, seyng Gode hade not promisede that thi awin werkis sal saue the, thairfor faith in thi awin werkis cann neuir quiete thi consciens, nor certifye the befor Gode (quhen Gode commiss to judge and to tak anne reknyng) that thi synnes ar forgewin the. Beyewnde all this, my 25 awin werkis cann neuir satisfye the law, or pay hir that J awe hir, for I awe the law to luf hir (b) with all my hart, saul, pouer, and mycht. Quhillk thing to paye I am neuir abile, quhill I am compased with fleische. Na, I cann nocht aniss begynne to luf the law except I be first 30 suir by faith that Gode luffit me ande forgiffis me.

Finallye, that we say faith only justified, awtht not to offende na mann. For gif this be trew that Crist only redemit ws, Christ only bwire our synnes and maide satis-factiounn for themm, ande purchased us the fauour of 35

- Gode, then monn of neide it be trew that the traist only in Christes deserwyng, ande in the promises of Gode
the fader, maide to uss for Christis saik, doth only quiete the consciens, and certifye hir that the synnes ar forgiffin.
5 Quhen thai say anne mann monn repent, forsaik synn, ande haif anne purpose to synn na maire, as neire as he cann, ande luf the law of Gode, Ergo, faith ande luf justified not, I ansueir, that ande all lyk argumentes ar nocht, ande lyk to this:—I monn repent ande be sary.

leif it, or ellis I cann nocht be partaker of the mercy quhiik Christ hes deservit for me. Ergo, Christ only justified me F. 247 v.
not; or Christ only had not ma[id] satisfactiounn for my synnes. As this is anne nochtthy argument, su[a is] the 15 vthir.

- Now go to, reader, ande according to the ordour of Paule, ewin sua do thou. First, behald thi self diligently in the law of Gode, and se thair thi just dampnatiounn.
Secunndly, turnne thi eyne to Christ, ande se thair the 20 excedyng mercy of thi maist kynde and luffing fader.
Thridly, remembyr that Christ maide nocht this attonement that thou suld anger Gode agaynne, nothir deide
he for thi synnes that thou suld lyue still in themm, nothir clengit he the that thou sulde returnne (as anne swynne) 25 vnto thinne auld pwdyll agaynne; bot that thou suld be ane new creature, ande lyue anne new lyffe after the will of Gode, ande nocht of the fleische.
Ande be diligent, lest throw thi awin negligence ande vnthankfulness 30 thou lose this fauour ande mercy agaynne.
